

We swear the following story is true: An Air Canada pilot, just turned 50, received an extremely tough medical. His doctor found nothing wrong but said he would be required to answer some personal questions.

"Do you smoke?" asked the medic.
"No," replied the pilot.
The pilot said just average — about three or four at a party.

"What about your sex life?" asked the doctor.
That was average, too, the pilot replied.
"Be more specific," said the peeved doctor. "When, actually, was the last time you were with a woman?"

Said the pilot: "Nineteen forty-five."
That, said the doctor, certainly is not normal nor average.
I don't think it's so bad, doctor, it's only 21:30 now."
